Political Facts Gleaned from Garfield's Private Papers.

Conkling's Resignation and the Events Which Led to It.

Case in Which There Seems to Have Reen No Safety in a Multitude of Counselors.

Washington, June 27 -The Chicago Times correspondent sends the following to his paper this morning: Some stories are going the rounds about letters which President Carfield's biographer has discovered among the documents intrusted to him, which would explain the great civil war in the Republican party which culminated in the resignation of Senators Conkling and Platt, if not in the assassination of the president. President Hinsdale may not dare to publish everything on that subject which he finds, and he may not have found much. It is just possible that some papers may have been destroyed, but this is not likely, as President Garfield is understood to have been one of those painstaking persons who save every-thing. It is therefore very probable President Hinsdale has in his possession a letter from Mr. Blaine to President Garfield threatening to resign the socretaryship of state if Mr. Robertson were not nominated collector of New York. The following account of the circumstances preceding the writing of that letter came from the late E. W. Stoughton, of counsel for Mr. Hayes before the electoral commission, minister to Russia, and during all the negotiations be-tween Gen Garfield and Senator Coulding the means of communication between them. He discriminated carefully between the things that he knew of his own knowledge and those which he learned from another person, but which he fully believed. General Garfield had, as is known to all, an ambition to unite the stalwart and half-breed factions of the party, and he recognized fully the obligations that he was under to Senator Conkling and his friends in the election. It is not true that the Stalwarts elected the Republican ticket any more than the Half-Breeds did, nor is any special praise for supporting the party ticket due to the man who never lost a chance to express his seem of botters, and who would, but for General Garfield, have got the Chicago convention to expel the only three men in it who would not vote for his resolution binding overy member nort the ticket, who of the convention to s ever might be on it. When Senator Conkling offered that resolution he supposed his candidate would head the ticket, and be offerred the resolution to catch the friends of other candidates. As it happened, the name of another man headed the ticket, and the great New Yorker went affshing and was careful to give the impression to the country that he would not support it. After this bolt by the arch enemy of bolting had imperilled the party's chances of success, he kindly consented to enter the campaign and ranke some speaches, in which the head of the ticket was not alluded to. The party being united, it carried the election, and then, as a matter of course, the credit of the victory was claimed exclusively for Roscoe Conkling. That was what he held off for in the early part of the enmpaign.

But, not resenting this, the president-elect wished to have all factions represented in his cabinet, and, through Mr. Stoughton, he solicited an expression of Mr. Conkling's wishes. This gentleman named John Jacob Astor for secretary of the treasury. Mr. Conkling was careful to name a man who could hardly be said to be in politics, and was for that reason not at all likely to develop into a rival. Mr. Astor was rich; he had often contributed liberally to the party treasury; he would never be in his patron's way. Probably Gen. Garfield never did promise to appoint Mr. Astor, but the way in which he asked Mr. Conkling to indicate a New York man for the cabinet implied a promise to appoint the man named some other man named by Mr. Conkling, or some other man named by let. Continues, if the first man named was out of the ques-

Apparently, the matter was settled, but Gon, Garfield had invited overybody to come to Mentor and tell him what to do, and everybody accepted the invitation. Among them were some people who thought Judge Folger was the proper person to represent New York in the cabinet; so the president-elect dropped Mr. Astorand invited the judge to come and see him. The judge did so, and had a long talk with Gen. Garffeld, and went home as cortain that he was going to be the next secretary of the treasury as though his name had been sent in to the senate. About canvassing the strong points of various west-ern candidates. After he got to Washington he decided that Windom must have the treasury, and, as Judge Folger had declined to put up and, as Judge Folger and decimed to put ap-with the attorney generalship, he had a New Month minister yet to select. Then he offered York minister yet to select. Then he offered the navy department to Levi P. Morton, who of course asked the great Conkling whether he should accept. Mr. Conkling was not fully informed as to all the coqueting with possible secretaries of the treasury that had been going on in Mentor, and did not believe that the treasury had been absolutely made over to a western man without a word being said to him about the mat-ter, and he opposed Mr. Morton's taking the navy portfolio, because that would make it impossible for New York to get the troasury, and he assumed that, if Morton declined, the original agreement would be carried out, and Astor would get the treasury. On Mr. Conkling's advice Mr. Morton expressed a preference for the post of minister to France.

But Astor had been dropped absolutely a long time before, and when Mr. Mortou declined to take the navy Mr. James was taken, became a professor of mathematics in a to Mr. Conkling's disgust, as the New York member and put in charge of the postofice member and put in charge of the postofice department. Mr. Conkling | ______ tely institut-and public faith, but did not decide on a war with the administration.

But there were other negotiations to be carried on. Mr. Blaine was determined that Mr. Robertson should be taken care of, and he was equally dotermined, though he did not explain all this to the president, that Mr. Conkling should be humbled in that air. Conking should be numbed in the interest, it has recently been made to ap-pear, of a second term for President Garfield. The latter, however, was not prepared to make war on the New York senator, and tried to please each of the two antagonists, with the usual resu't. It occurred to him that he the usual resu't. It occurred to him that he could satisfy Robertson with a good place abroad, but before sending his name to the senate he wished to find out whether Mr. Coukling would fight the nomination. Therefore he begged Mr. Stoughton to act again in the capacity of an intermediary. Mr. Stoughton was not anxious to do this. He had nerton was not anxious to do this. He had performed that task once and the president had repudiated what he and Mr. Conkling regarded as a bargain. But the president sat down very close to Mr. Stoughton in that foud, familiar way for which he was noted, and stroked his knee and patted his back and explained how sorry he was that he could not have obliged Mr. Conkling, and why it was impossible, and how grateful he was for Mr. Conkling's help during the campaign, and how important it was that Mr. Stoughton should do all he could to preserve harmony in the party; and the entinent messonger yielded and called on Mr. Conkling. Mr. Conkling assented on certain conditions. In his own somewhat forcible language he guessed if the president nominated Robertson for some consulate he could hold his nose while the senate confirmed him. But Merritt was not to be removed from the New York custom-louse Merritt was no pet of Conkling's. The latter had done everything he could to prevent the removal of Arthur and the appointment of Merritt. But Merritt was in, and he was not an enemy of Conkling and he was running the custom-house on a non-partisan basis, so that, if the custom-house was no bein to Coulding, it was at least no hindrance to bim, and Mr. Coulding did not care to take his chances with a collector that the president, advised by the then secretary of state, would be likely to select. There were some arrangements regarding New York politics that the president wanted Mr. Conkling to make. They were small matters that Mr. Stoughton was not familiar with. Mr. Conkling promised to execute the president's vishes in this regard. The bargain was made. Robertson was to go abroad unopposed by Mr. Conkling; in the minor matters just referred to Mr. Conkling agreed to have the president's wishes carried out, and all that he asked in return was that Gen. Merritt should not be removed and a place for one of Mr.

Blaine's friends created. So far Mr. Stoughton said he was a compatent witness, for he was equally intimate with Garfield and Conkling, and carried on the negotiations between them. The rest of the story—as he was so informed that he fully believed it-was that Mr. Blaine was in due time apprised of the agreement, and thereupon wrote a letter to President Garfield declaring that he would resign his place in the cabinet if Mr. Robertson were not nominated collector of New York, and requesting an answer. This letter was delivered about 9 o'clock in the morning. Great as Blaine's influence with Garfield was this dictation and threat were a little too much, and the president made no reply. His silence informed dent made no reply. His sitence informed the secretary of state that he might resign; his demands could not be compiled with. But Mr. Blaine would not let the matter rost there. Having waited in vain all day for a reply, in the evening he went to the White House and repeated his demand for Repeatson's noningaine in passon mand for Robertson's nomination in person. The interview lasted till a late hour of night, and Mr. Blaine's strong will and aggressive mess carried the day in his struggle with a man who, in spite of many admirable quali-ties, relied too little on his own convictions. and too much on the representations of

The next morning Mr. Conkling sat in the senate chamber writing a telegraphic dispatch to political friends of his, asking dispatch to political president had asked for them to do what the president had asked for the local matters already referred to, and was thus engaged in completing his agreement with the president when nominations by the president were received. The first name read was that of Mr. Robertson for collector of the port of New York. Mr. Stoughton was not called to carry on any more negotiations; he would have declined if he had been, and if he had accepted Mr. Conkling would not have received him. The New York senator was not negotiating any more with the president.

Mr. Rogers' Scheme for Ascertaining the Condition on Our Commerce.

Washington, June 27. - The receipts f National bank notes for redemption at the redemption division of the treasury department is regarded by Mr. Rogers, the chief of the bureau, as a sort of barometer of the condition of the commerce of the country. When business is very active and money is in great demand the receipts of notes for redamption decrease, and when business is dull the notes pour in. At the seasons of the year when crops are moving the receipts fall off. A diagram has been made in the redemption division, showing the variation in receipts by tracings, which resemble the marks of an automatic register upon a steam-boiler to show the pressure of Taking the month of June, the end of the fiscal year, as a standard, the chart shows that in 1875, one year after the estab-Ishment of the division, 18,000,000 were redeemed: in June, 1870, 28,000,000; in June, 1877, 28,000,000. The depression in trade following the panic of 1873 was then most keenly felt, although affairs were mending. The redemption of notes then took a downward track. In June, 1878, 24,000,000 were redeemed; in June, 1879, 13,000,000; in June, 2000,000 1880, 8,000,000; and in June, 1881, 7,000,000 were redeemed. The continued shortage in values and moderate trade since that date is shown by the fact that the receipts for June, 1882, were 9,000,000, and the receipts for the present mouth will be about 15,000,

POLITICAL NOTES

The Ohio Campaign ... Similar Views from Opposite Standpoints---Sheridan for President.

CHICAGO, June 27.—A Columbus, O., special to The Tribune says: Dropping into the office of the clerk of the supreme court this morning. The Tribune representative found Judge William Lawrence, first comptroller of the United States treasury, busily engaged searching the records for official informa-"Judgo Lawrence, what do you think of the chances of the Republican party for carrying Ohio?"

"I think they are excellent—have been vastly improved by the events of the last week. Before the Democratic state convenweek, nerore the Democratic state convention I thought it about an even thing, with the chances probably in favor of the Republicans, but there is now no doubt in any mind that the Democrats will be floored in October 19

"Will you be more specific and give some of your reasons?" Well, first, the turbulency and disgraceful conduct of the members of last Thursday's convention has disposted the sober-thinking, order-loving men of the party, and will have some—only a little, perhaps, but some—effect in losing votes for the Democrats. Again, the manner in which Judge Houdley was nominated is anything but favorable to the success of his campaign. It may not have been done with Hoadley's knowledge or consent, and yet it is evident that there was a great deal of counivance and questionable conduct connected with the nomination made, and the ward men have a right to foel, as they do, that the general was the victim of factions manipula-tion, and was unfairly dealt with. Then, too, the soldier element of the Democratic party-and there were and are many loyal Union men in it-is irritated and offended by the treatment a Union officer of courage and merit has received at the hands of his sup-posed friends; nor will this soreness be sufliciently healed by the time the October election shall roll round to induce them to support the Democratic candidate for governor. Another factor, and an important one, which will tell against Hoadly, is his comparatively recent advocacy of Democratic principles. General Powell truly said that Ward's nomination would appeal to the old reliable mossback Democrats. I mean no disrespect by this term, even as Mr. Powell intended none. But, while a man has undoubtedly the right to change his political views, the old-liners are not disposed to look flavorably upon him, and as one of them has recently expressed himself, are not going to vote for any more Republicaus. Of that they had enough during the Bookwalter and one or two previous campaigns, and this in conjunction with the way the whole thing was done will militate most powerfully against the Democratic state ticket. I am willing to be recorded as predicting a Republican victory this fall by at least 15,000 majority." SENATOR THURMAN'S SON.

The howl which has gone up from those numerous Democrats who were so strong for Ward can hardly be considered prophetic of success to Judge Hondley. Such men as Judge Thurman are lost to the cause in Ohio this full, and they are extremely bitter against the Democracy for naming a man who recently a Republican. Your representative met Alien W. Thurman, son of Senator Thorman, and asked him about his father's ideas of the situation. "I have not seen father since the nomination was made," he said, and he has not said a word to me about the matter.'

"I am told that you are going to vote for "Yes, sir; I am going to vote for him and work all I can for his election." Judgo Foraker."

Why "Because if I've got to vote for one of two Republicans I want to vote for the one I con sider an honorable man." "Then you don't think Judge Hondley is an uonorable man?" "No, sir, I do not," very emphatically.

Minneapolis, June 27.—The Journal, after reviewing the remarkable career of Gen. Phil. Sheridan, says:

Phil. Sheridan, says:

As the Republicans are now looking about for a presidential candidate the Journal seizes this opportunity to suggest the mano of Gen. Sheridan. Sheridan is a thoroughgoing Republican—a Republican by instinct as well as by reflection and conviction. His every inputse is patriotic. Every pulsation of his heart beats time to the Union. It may be claimed that his genius is purely military, but to our view it is as statesmanlike as military. His administration of affairs at New Orleans showed executive ability of the highest order. Orant was said to have been the genius of common sense, but Sheridan's common sense is of a keener and brighter quality than Grant's. It can be said of Sheridan that he never made a mistake in the execution of any duty or administration of any trust. As president we believe he would combine all the best qualities of Andrew Jackson, Abrabam Lincoln, and Gen. Grant. He is as brave and honest as Jackson, as partiotic and intelligent as Lincoln as firm and res-Abraham Lincoln, and test on a patriotic and intelligent as Lincoln, as firm and resolute as Grant—and possesses withal a keener sense of honor, which would make it impossible for knaves to gain paramount in-fluence over him, as they did sometimes over

If the Republicans want to make sure of victory in 1884, they should nominate Phil Sheridan.

A Slight Change for the Better in the Situation on the Great Rivers.

The Waters Show Signs of Subsiding at Last-Reports from St. Louis and Other Points.

Sr. Louis, June 27.-The river begun to slowly subside early yesterday morning, and at noon from various points came the news that the water had fallen over an inch. Tho fact was laden with joy, tempered, however, by the completeness of accomplished disaster and by the knowledge that the regular June rise had set in at upper Misouri points, which it is expected will replace the eight or ten inches of fall expected to take place between now and next Sunday, very likely to raise the river a foot higher than it has been this year. As the farmers put it: "The bottom will not clear before the June rise will be on it." Dejection will be the ruling frame of mind among the farmers for many a long day yet. "The fall of water makes no difference to us," said a Madison farmer, who is out of $10,000 by the flood. "I am like the boy who fell into the pond and said he didn't care a darn whether it rained or shone." A relief party just returning from the St. Charles district reports great hardship and sorrow among the farmers there, who have been woful sufferers. of the scenes were heartrending. Many One farmer, who before the flood was one of the mest prosperous in the county, was found with his family in the garret of his dwelling. The relief party rowed up to the house, and asked the old man to get into the house, and asked the old man to get into the skiff. "No," he said, "I will not go with you. Everything I've got in the world is jost, and I have made up my mind to stay here and die with my family." He was at length persuaded to accompany the rescuers, and the whole party are now in Portage designed the whole party are now in Portage designed the whole party are now. and the whole party are now in Portage des Sioux, trying to conjure a bright side to the present state of affairs. One of the most striking features of flood life is the long villages of freight-cars which crowd saveral of the railroad tracks in and near the American bottom. With genuine womanly pride, these cramped quarters have not only been made cosily habitable, but in nearly all of them efforts have been made to supply them with the elegancies of life. Many of the freight-car floors are carpeted. Brackets and other knickknacks have been placed upon the walls, and here and there scalloped paper ornaments flutter from the ceilings. From one of these box-car domiciles floated yesterday evening a song of praiso with a genuine melodeon necomponiment, an evidence of domestic luxury which seemed an extraordinary contrast to the wild character of the surroundings.

. There is but little new to note in the genoral condition of the flooded districts. hardship is not proving as great as had been anticipated, and, acting upon information received, the management of the board of trade has decided not to permit an appeal to be made to that body, as it was not deemed nocessary. As had been anticipated, attempts have been made by farmers to cut the embankments and relieve their farms at the expense of East St. Louis. The territory beween the Cairo Short-Line shops and the Pittburg dike is under several feet of water from the south slough. The space north of the dike is under about five feet more of water than the north side, and repeated attempts have been made to cut the embank ments. Deputy Sheriff Anthony, in charge of a posse of men armed with double-barreled shet-guns, stood guard on the embankment all night, and reported in the morning that no hostile movement was made. The guard at this point was relieved in the morning, but will be replaced every night till the danger it over. Jurrett's station, on the Cairo Shors Line, three miles from East St. Louis, is really the most dangerous point to the city. The back-waters flowed through a culvert Mississippi embankment near Gross Park were still watching at noon yesterday, but no one attempted to cut the dike. It is feared, however, as the temper of the become more rapid and cause them to aban one knows, but the worst is feared. Advices from the southeastern section of St. Charles county, Missouri, in the region of Portage dos Sioux, give the individual losses of about one handred farmors, which aggregate over $60,000. These range from $100 to $5,000, and represent wheat and corn, no uccount being taken of other property destroyed or greatly damaged except in less than half a dozen cases: O. M. Gray, 100 acres and house, $3,000; David Gray, 50 acres and house, $1,500; Mrs. Achile, 70 acres $2,000; A. loss in this section alone is estimated at $200,-000. Very little live stock was lost, as almost all the animals had been driven to the high ground in time to save them. The report from Kansas City and Atchison is that the waters are stationary. At Kansas City no great damage has been done, but there is no apparent prospect for a speedy decline of the river as all the small streams are full to overflowing. At Atchison the damage to railways centering there is estimated at $500,000.

Alton, Ill., June 27.—During the past twenty-for hours theriver has fallen two joches, and it is believed the worst is over. The water, however, will be a week or two in subsiding, and the damage to the farming interest for the present is unchangeable. The Missouri is still running across to the Mississippi above not probably cut a permanent channel. The demoralization of the railway trains continues. The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, Indianapolis & St. Louis, and Chicago & Alton trains are still transferring passengers here. The suffering resulting from the flood in this county and St. Charles county, Missouri, is great, and it is hoped that the charitable will render needed aid. Hundreds of persons are homeless and have lost their all.

SNUBBING BEN BUTLER.

senator Hoar Positively Refuses t Sit at the Same Table with the Governor of Massachusetts. Boston, June 27.—The name of Butter is to some of the Harvard alumni what a red rag is to a bull. It is sufficient to suggest his resence at a gathering of the alumni of this venerable institution to stir up a very lively hornets' nest. The governor was invited to attend the commencement exercises as the personal guest of Prof. Eliot, who apparently does not share in the dislike felt by intelligent and refined people generally to Butler's course, or else he has some reasons which are not apparent to the public at large for showing his excellency courteous attentions. Senator Hoar, by virtue of his office as president of the Alumni association, would have presided at the dinner had it not been for the action of President Eliot, but Mr. Hoar cancet abide Butler, and positively refuses to break bread with him next Wednesday, consequently the duty of presiding on that festive occasion will devolve upon Joseph H. Choate, of New York, third vicepresident of the Alunini association. Choate will have the pleasure of introducing Gov. Butler to respond to the sentiments: "The commonwealth of Massachusetts." Owing to Butler's incongruous garments on great occasions, it will not be surprising, inasmuch as he is to be escorted by the National Lancers, if he should ride to Cambridge in all the glory of his major-general's m. form. For the first time in the history of the college the graduating class will participate in the commence-ment dinner, and if the venerable alumni de not get enthusiastic over Butler the "boys" will probably give the "old man" a good "send-off."

The New Orleans Oil Works Fire. New Orleans, June 27 .- The losses from the fire at the Ylanters' Crescent oil-works at Algeers, opposite the city, prove to be slightly greater than at first estimated. The estimate made was $400,000. The directors of the company fix it at $450,000, there being a company fix it at $450,000, there being a larger stock of oil and cil-cake in the building that was at first thought. There were 2,200 barrels of oil barreled, 11,500 barrels in tanks, 3,275 sacks of oil cake, 300 sacks of meal, 6,000 bags of cotton seed, and 99 bales of cotton stored in the building, of a total value of $200,000, all of which will prove a complete loss. The loss of the building is estimated at $150,000, and on the ma chinery $150,000, making a total of $500,000; insured for about balf its value.

This is little more than half the value of the property consumed. The result of the fire has been to demoralize the stock of the Planters Crescent company, and whereas it was selling at 125 only 75 was bid for it on change after the fire. The burnt building was erected in 1847 as an iron foundry, and was used by Gen. Butler during the war as a military prison. Besides the oil works, six small build-ings on Elmira street were destroyed, valued at $10,000; fully insured. valued at $10,000; fully insured. The oil works burned very rapidly and thoroughly. The books and papers was saved with difficulty, and the building was completely destroyed. The walls eaved in the towers alone being left to mark the life. Some of the figurar scaled by the site. None of the firemen scalded by the one of the tanks that exburning oit from ploded is in danger. A large portion of the New Orleans fire department was sent over to Algiers during the conflagration and all held in readiness, as at one time when the tanks exploded and the burning oil ran into the gutters, there was great danger of the conflagration extending to all the neighboring buildings.

in the embankment, yesterday, and over-flowed a large strip of lowlands before the culvert could be stopped. The leak was final ly patched, and no danger was anticipated till the owners of the submerged farms visited the culvert in the evening and threatened to to allow the waters confined on their farms to escape. Several police were in in the vicinity helping to strengthen the break, and compelled the angry farmers to leave the neighborhood. The police stood guard all night, and sent information of the state of affairs to police headquarters. Early in the morning a delegation of twenty angry farmers and sufferers from the flood visited town and demanded that the appropriate account in a constant of the sufference of the control of the sufference of the that the culvert be opened immediately under penalty of heavy lawsuits. Not meeting with much encouragement they departed for the culvert, threatening to remove the whole embankment as soon as they arrived there. A posso was immediately organized and armed with shot-guns, and started for the threatened point, with instructions to use all peaceable efforts to prevent violence, but use the shotguns if necessary to save the embank-ment. DOW'S exactly the same evidence that supports a skillful physician's reputation. Many of those medicines came out of the regular practice, and were prepared and originally prescribed by the best physicians. Yeary few of them, we believe are humbags and francis in the consciousness or the intent of their makers. The people, who are necessarily the judges, both of doctors and of medicines, say that these medicines are not all francis, and if human testimony is good for anything, that fact is established.—Scribner's Monthly.

time, when freed from the onerous du-ties of lecturer, was taken up with ex-periments in these sciences. So well did he succeed in these things, and such marvelous results did he often obtain, that the common people feared him, and even among the learned it was bruited abroad that he was in secret collusion with the dark powers. He studied the nature of the many diseases to which mankind is heir, and in consequence was often able to effect cures when the physician's art had failed. This was ascribed to his power of magic and many of the simple people looked upon him with terror. Even the brothers of the convent feared to enter his dread workshop, and crossed themselves de-voutly when obliged to enter within its mysterious precincts. History is full of legends about his wonderful power in mechanics, and represents him to us as not only surprising the lowlier classes, but as astounding the educated by his contrivances. Even Thomas of Aquin is related to have been terror-stricken by what he saw within the hidden sanctuary of his master. It is is said that one day Thomas, whose curiosity led him to observe his master's work, profited by his absence to examine the interior of his labratory. Strange animals which he had never before seen, instruments artistically made, vessels of most curious shape, were there exposed. Thomas' astonishment increased in proportion as he looked around. Something drew him toward the corner of the room. A scarlet curtain, reaching in long and close folds to the ground, seemed to him to conceal an object. He approached, and timidly drawing aside the curtain, found himself face to face with a beautiful maiden. He wished to ily, but felt himself detained by magical force, and was compelled, in spite of himself, to gaze on the enchanting figure of a young girl. The more he gazed, the more it shone before his eyes, the greater became his confusion. But this was not all. The strange form addressed to him the triple salutation: "Salve, salve, salve." Frightened beyond measure. Thomas imagined that the prince of hell was sporting with him. In the fear and uncasiness that possessed him he strove to defend himself as best he could against the tempter. He selled a stick which was near him, and, exclaiming: "Begone, Satan!" struck the imaginary demon repeated blows, till the automaton (for it was nothing else) broke in pieces. Then, seized with terror, he turned to fly from the room, when he was met at the door by Albert. The master, seeing what had happened in his absence, and that the fruit of his long application was annihilated, cried aloud in grief: "O Thomas, Thomas! what have you done? In one instant you have destroyed the labor of thirty years!" It would appear that Albert had made an automaton capable of pronau made an automaton capable of pronouncing certain phrases and of walking across a room while sweeping it. This was the demon which terrified Thorsas and which occupied the thoughts of the inventive Albert. A host of other traditions have been handed down recognitions. ditions have been handed down concerning him, many of them even ludierous, but which fortunately have been denied by his earliest biographers. For instance, he is said to have transported the daughter of the King of France through the hair to Cologue. Another states that he rode to Rome on the back of the devil to absolve the Pope from some peccadillo into which he had Another tells us that he traversed the globe with Alexander the Great. Yet from these relies we may well gather the impression which Albert must have left upon his age, since legend and fable and poetry all combine to weave a historic garland for him. However, although he excelled in sciences and arts, in metaphysics and philoso-phy, the grandest claim which he has to our love and veneration comes from the fact that while first in letters, he was also first among his peers in virtue. - The Catholic World. Why suffer longer from dyspepsia, in digestion, want of appetite, loss of strength, lack of energy, malaria, intermittent fevers, etc.? Brown's iron Bitters never fail to cure these diseases. They act like a charm on the digestive

Mr. Joseph Mulhall, just returned from Celorado, speaks of a new mining camp just opened, which, in spite of all obstacles, is bound to become another Leadville in point of growth and notoriety. It is the town of Carbonate, situated in Garfield County. Colorado, in the midst of the Ute reservation, which was opened up to the whites for settlement and occupation only last year. The new city, new searcely known to the outside world, was laid out on the 8th day of last month, and now contains three or four cabins, the domiciles of four or five men who have been at work all winter. It is said to contain a pure lead of carbonates without walls on either side, and running from 50 to 582 ounces of silver, with 35 to 42 per cent of lend to the ton. The snow in that region is now from four to ten feet deep for eighteen miles in all directions, and the only way to get to the new El Dorado is on snow-shoes, and blankets and provisions have to be carried over the crust in this way. And yet since the opening of the mines one thousand peo-pie nave been waiting to go there, and already 347 lots have been sold at from $50 to $250 apiece cash.

Mr. Mulhall, with Mr. John Senger, of Denver, went to within eighteen miles of the spot, being stopped by the snow at the Soda Springs, or Rouring Fork, where are the linest hot springs in the world. They found some twentyfive people already located about the springs, where they had erected bath-ing-tents, showing the incipient stages of a great watering-place—yet to be puffed into notice—for the benefit of suffering invalids. Mr. Songer provided himself with snow-shoes-a long, slender shoe, not as wide as that in use by the Canadians and Indians of the East in the early days—with which he started over the snow-crust for Carbonato camp, but Mr. Mulhall would not accompany him with this cumbrous means of locomotion. To people not used to snow-shoes, their weight and unwieldi-ness, requiring a straddle of the legs, would soon produce fatigue and an in ability to proceed, and the wearer would break down under the encumbrance. Mr. Mulhall staid eight days at the Soda Springs, and will return there in a short time, when the trails will be opened through the snow.

Mr. Songer has since been beard from. He traveled the distance on snow-shoes, carrying his blankets and provisions. He found everybody at Carbonate moving about on snow-shoes, which are an essential part of the wearing apparel. He saw four or five claims whère work is going on, bringing out rich samples, and he further noticed a number of men digging in the snow trying to find locations which they had made the previous season. Mr. Songer believes that in this new mining district genuine carbonate of a paying grade will be found over a very extensive area, and he proposes to return and aid the army of prospectors that will repair thither. No excitement, not excepting cadville, has more thoroughly aroused the citizens of Colorado, and it is calculated at least twenty thousand people will visit the carbonate fields of Garfield County within the year. Mr. Mulhall says that Carbonato

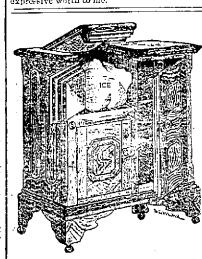

Camp is ninely-seven miles from Lead-ville, due west, and twelve miles from old Fort Deliance. It is twenty-five miles from the mouth of Eagle River, which empties into Rooney Fork. The site of these carbonates is 10,500 feet above the sea level. There is, in addition to the silver mines, a body of coal that faces out on the cliffs for thirty-five miles. This coal can be seen in thick layers, from which large blocks have tumbled out.—St. Louis Republican. The same of the same of the same of the

A Woman's Experience.

MRS. WILLIAM DOWNES, of Uxbridge, Mass. writes on March 15, 1883, as follows: "During the past three years I have been reat sufferer from a complication of diseases which baffled the skill of the most experienced doctors, as I could not obtain permanent relief by their treatment and prescriptions; and I have ly that I was so reduced in strength as to be unable to leave the bed, and the doctors informed me that there was no hope of a recovery. In this exhausted and discouraged condition a dear friend persuaded me to use Hunt's Remedy, and after taking it only three days I commenced to get better, and to my great joy and delight I have continued to improve constantly by its use, until now, after having taken the remedy only a few weeks, I am able to be about my louse again, and am now doing my house work. My lame back is cured, the severe pains have disappeared, and I amnow in better heath than for many years, and beg this privilege of glady recommending Hunt's Remedy to all who are afflicted with any disease of the kidneys or liver; and I also highly recommend it for the attacks of sick leadache. My husband also has experienced a very great benefit to his health by the use of this most valuable medicine, Hunt's Romody."

"Our Flug is Still There." Mr. S. E. Longfellow, Augusta, Mc., cast ide river, writes us under date of April 15, 1883: "To whom it may concern: This may certify that two years ago I was very badly afflicted with kidney and urinary difficulties, which extended through the system and laid me up for weeks, so that I could do no work. I had the most skilful physician in town, who gave me no assistance. Hearing of Hunt's Remedy, I got a bottle, and half of it cured me entirely, so that I have been well ever since. The other half I gave to a neighbor who was afflicted much as I was, and it restored him to health. I can truly say Hunt's Remedy has been of great and inexpressive worth to me."

-The masons have commenced laying oricks on the second and last story of Jackman's block, on Main street. The building will hardly be enclosed by the first of July. -The graduating exercises of the high school class in the Congregational church on Friday atternoor, will commence at two o'clock instead of one o'clock as stated yesterday. -Mr. C. W. Roberts, business manager of the celebrated Vokes family, was in the city to day. The sale of reserved seats for the entertainment will begin tomorrow morning. -The frequent explosion of fire-crackers in our streets, is a first-class indication that the "kids" have laid up plenty of change, and are even now getting ready to celebrate the Fourth in grand style.

-Mr. Richardson is receiving a large number of applications for positions in the postoffice, and we are requested to say that there will be no immediate or material change in the clerical force in the office under his administration.

-Mr. Bart. H. Baldwin is hard at work organizing his motely brigade for the fourth of July. Bart has commenced in earnest, and cur people may expect to something new on day in the way of a ragamuffin pararde. -Albert Donavan, a stranger, while drunk made an assault Saturday night, upon Mr. S. S. Hodge, in the latter's store. To-day Donovan was sentenced to pay a fine of $10 and in default of payment he was sent to jail for twenty days .- Beloit Free Press. -Messrs. Sam'l Wyler and H. S

Adler will soon engage in manufacture of cigars, having leased a portion of the Tallman block on West Milwaukee street for that purpose, and will commence business as soon as arrangements can be perfected. -Yesterday we visited Lr. Sanborn's office for the purpose of inspecting his elegantly appointed rooms which he recently has had decorated in the latest and most artistic style. The doctor has exercised good taste, not only in the selection of the gold and velvet papers, but in the happy and pleasing arrangement of the brie-a-bruc.

-A dispatch from Jefferson to the Chicago Times, of last evening's date, says: "At 5 p. m. to-day, Guy, aged 10 years, second son of Col. George W. Bird, an attorney of this state, was drowned while bathing in Rock alver about one mile from this city. Immediately a large force of men went to work dragging the river where the unfortunate lad disappeared, but their search for the recovery of his body has proved fruitless."

-If stronger proof is necessary to prove that Janesy life is one of the healthiest cities in America than the small number of interments in the cometery this season, we will quote the remark of Colonel Britton, of the firm of Britton & Kimball, who do pretty much all the undertaking business of the city. The colonel says that during the eighteen years he has been in the business in Janesville, he never saw the undertaking business as dull as it is at present. No body dying, and hardly any body seriously sick. Janesville is a healthy city.

-James Bowen, the vagrant who arrested during the time that Cole's circus was in the city, pleaded guilty this morning and, in accordance with the provisions of the law which was enacted last winter, was given six months in the state prison at hard labor with one day of solitary confinement. This is the first tramp in the state, as far as can be learned, who has suffered the penalty of the new law. Now that the ice has been broken by Judge Braley, a more generous sprinkling of similar sentences may be expected throughout the commonwealth .- State Journal.

—Adjutant Newman, of the first regiment W. N. G., has sent an invitation to the Milwaukee Light Horse Squairon, to visit Janesville during the encampment of the regiment in August next. Last year, while in camp at Oconomowoo, the officers of the cavalry company expressed a desire to go into camp this year with the first regiment, and it is thought that they will accept the invitation extended. A company of cavalry will add a great deal of interest to the camp, and will tend to make the life about the "city of tents," less monotonous. We hope they will accept the invitation to be present.

The Gazette calls the attention of its readers to the advertisement of Mr. R. M. Bostwick, proprietor of the the Jumbo clothing store of Janesville. He takes personal pride in the fact that he has one of the very largest clothing store in southern Wisconsin, and what is more important still his stock is one of the best in the state. A better assortment of ready made goods-to suit all classes of purchrsers—was never put on the shelves or counters of any other clothing house in Wisconsin. And another important point, the prices are as popular as the goods and never full to command satis-

He disgusted Mr. Stannard, the umpire, so much by his conduct that he resigned gerously sick for some time past is now the position and Mr. Hullinger, a former member of Bond's club, and a Madison man also, took the position, and if anything favored the visiting club, but it did not avail.
